Leaves wearm, February 8.—The legislature has passed a bill providing for a constitution and formation of a state government. It authorized an election on the 4th Monday in March, for or against holding a convention. If favorable, an election of fifty delegates will be held on the 1st Monday in June. The convention will meet on the 1st Tuesday in July, at Wyandotte City. The constitution is to be submitted to the people in October, and the officers elected under the constitution in December.

Soulouque had been compelled to retreat

A naval engagement had taken place off St. Marc, six ressels taking part. The Admiral's vessel was badly damaged, and the whole fleet bore up for Port-ac Prince. Reinforcements were joining Geffrard from all points. It was believed that Soulouque would not be able to force his way into Port-au-Prince, the city being surrounded by the republicans.

Soulouque's coffee had all been seized and sold at auction. A Danish brig had been charged by him to load, but it was thought that she would not be allowed to enter at Port-au Prince. When the schooner Mercy left, the city was under arms, and no mail was allowed to pass

Connecticut Politics.

Harrord, February 7.—The democracy assembled to the number of one thousand five hundred this evening, and repudiated the proceedings of last Saturday evening. The Douglas resolutions, passed by about one hundred, were to-night repudiated, the democracy of Hartford not yet being ready to name a presidential candidate. Julius L. Strong was turned out of the State delegation, and Wm. W. Eaton put in his place. It was a rousing meeting. It endorsed the administration.

M'Re Poinsot did very well as Donna Anna, although somewhat deficient in declamation. She omitted if we are not mistaken—one or two rather difficult gems, yet her "or sai che onore" was sufficiently well executed to atone for errors of omission and of commission. M'lle (as the bills had it, we thought it was Madame) Ghioni managed to get through with the part of Donna Elvira, but was altogether too tame and insipid for the vixen imagined by Mozart.

Madame Laborde was not the Zerlina that Piccolomini would have been, either in appearance or voice, but she did very well, excepting an occasional liberty with the music by omitting difficult passages. She sings every-thing that she can sing, with accuracy, but without sentiment, or that delicious, sympathetic tenderness, which is the charm of Italian music, and which makes it echo in the heart.

Carl Formes, as Leporello, was the best performer on the stage, and made a decided sensation, especially in the closing scenes. His "catalogue song" was the worst part of his rendition of the character, and his free buffo performance enlivened the whole opera, provoking frequent cold for the gainant first, but in the last two acts he be-came more identified with his part.

Signor Lorini did not improve on further acquaintance, and his Don Ottavio was a decided failure—besides marring the trio in the mask scene by false singing. Signor Coletti, as Masetto, was evidently well pleased with himself, yet he did his best to give the Laborde a chance to sing advantageously.

As we before remarked, the chorus was lamentably nall, as at least one hundred well-trained voices are nesmall, as at east one numeror were trained voices are ne-cessary to give effect to Don Giovanni. Neither was the orchestra sufficiently numerous; but, after all, we should be thankful for having heard this divine music as well rendered as it was, and for having seen this most ridicuisly diabolical plot so well performed.

or two volumes, paper cover, for one usual from Mss Bremer's preface:

"I am tired of the old story of lovers' sights, hopes, turments, quarrele, reconcidations, fascination, and happiness of deepair. I am tired of writing about them, as if the romance of life had not something more beautiful, something higher. I will at this time speak of one of those primary causes—one which existed before any lover's sight accorded from earth, insamuch as a Father's love booked down upon its first thick, and which will remain when they have all cessed. It is of this that I will now write." is of this that I will now write."
